Helen Kitchen is extremely well qualified to discuss "What Next in South Africa?" because she has been monitoring African political developments and U.S. policy toward Africa for three decades. Before joining CSIS in 1981 as director of African Studies, she served as director of the African Area Study of the Rockefeller Commission on Critical Choices. Among her many publications, the most recent are U.S. Interests in Africa (Washington Paper 98, CSIS/Praeger, 1983), and South Africa and the United States: Realities and Red Herrings (CSIS Significant Issues, 1984, co-author). She was editor of Africa Report from 1960 to 1968 and of African Index from 1978 to 1982, and now edits CSIS Africa Notes, a subscription briefing paper with worldwide circulation.

John de St. Jorre is a former Africa correspondent of The Observer (London). He is the author of The Brothers' War: Biafra and Nigeria (Houghton Mifflin, 1972) and A House Divided: South Africa's Uncertain Future (Carnegie Endowment, 1977). He was a senior writer for the Rockefeller-sponsored Study Commission on U.S. Policy Toward Southern Africa's report, South Africa, Time Running Out (University of California Press, 1981), and in 1982-83 was Africa director of the Washington-based International Reporting Information Systems (IRIS). He has contributed to CSIS Africa Notes #19, "Nigerian Democracy on Trial," (September 30, 1983), and #26, "Destabilization and Dialogue: South Africa's Emergence as a Regional Superpower," (April 17, 1984).
